

SEMICONDUCTOR DEVICE

ABSTRACT

5

A semiconductor device has a substrate and an active area formed within the same includes a first non-planar metallization level which is formed on the substrate and is in contact with an active area. Further, a second planar metallization level is arranged above the substrate spaced apart from the first metallization level and is connected to the first metallization level via a through connection.

10